FOREWORD

The Alabama Commission on Higher Education was authorized on May 14, 1969, for "the general purpose of promoting an educational system that will provide the highest possible quality of collegiate and university education to all persons in the State able and willing to profit from it." The Act which created the Commission directed it "to cause to be made such surveys and evaluations of higher education as is believed necessary for the purpose of providing appropriate information to carry out its powers and duties . . ." It is in accordance with this provision that this study is presented.

This report provides, for public use, data on degrees granted by Alabama institutions of higher education in the five-year period from July 1973 through June 1978. It supplements two previous Commission publications covering degree conferrals in 1971-72 and 1972-73. Data for these publications were taken from the Higher Education General Information Survey, OE-2300-2.1, of the U.S. Office of Education. Reflective of the reporting year utilized by this survey, annual data presented in this report represents the number of degrees conferred between July 1 and June 30 of each year. We express appreciation to the institutions for providing the U.S. Office of Education and Alabama Commission on Higher Education with the requested data which are "pertinent to the formulation of decisions and recommendations by the Commission" as called for in Act 14, Special Session 1969, and as amended by Act 461, Regular Session 1979.

Five Year Summary

A total of 127,897 degrees were awarded in Alabama's institutions of higher education from July 1, 1973 through June 30, 1978. Public institutions accounted for 86.8% of the total, while private colleges and universities awarded 13.2% of all conferrals. The number of degrees awarded at the various levels were as follows: associate-21,509; bachelor's-74,451; master's-26,894; doctor's-1,221; first professional-3,822 (see page 6). In comparison with the public sector, privately controlled institutions awarded higher percentages of bachelor's and first professional degrees and a similar percentage of associate degrees. Public institutions conferred a greater percentage of the master's degrees and awarded all doctor's degrees that were conferred in the State. The percentages of total degrees awarded during the period by level and sector were as follows:

Percentage of Degree Conferrals
by Sector and Level, 1973-77

	Ass.	Bac.	Mast.	Doc.	First Prof.	Tot. Deg. Conferred
Public	16.8	56.4	23.4	1.1	2.3	110,993
Private	17.1	70.0	5.4	0	7.5	16,904
Total	16.8	58.2	21.0	1.0	3.0	127,897

At the associate level the leading fields of study during the five year period were arts and sciences or general programs and health services technologies, which accounted for 56.3% and 17.6% of all such conferrals, respectively. Bachelor's degrees were most commonly awarded in the fields of education, business, and social sciences, which respectively comprised 21.9%, 16.9%, and 14.9% of the conferrals. At the master's level, education and business were the leading fields of study with 62.5% and 9.7% of all master's degrees being awarded in these areas respectively. At the doctor's level, 52.8% of all degrees conferred were awarded in the field of education. Nearly half (48.7%) of all first professional degrees were awarded in the field of law.

Trends in Degree Output by Level

A total of 28,162 degrees awarded in 1977-78, an increase of 23.5% over the 22,802 that were conferred in 1973-74. The number of degrees awarded in public institutions represented a 26.5% increase over the five-year period, while private colleges and universities increased degree output by 4.9%. Alabama's public institutions awarded 85.0% of all degrees in 1973-74, and 87.2% in 1977-78. The percentage of total degrees awarded by private institutions decreased from 15.0% of the total in 1973-74 to 12.7% in 1977-78.

Associate degree conferrals in 1977-78 numbered 5,411, an increase of 68.9% over the 3,208 associate degrees awarded in 1973-74. As such, associate degrees posted the greatest increase in conferrals among the various degree levels over the period. This increase was led by private sector institutions, which increased associate degree output by 126.5% between 1973-74 and 1977-78, while production in public colleges and universities posted a 61.2% increase. Reflective of this, private institutions accounted for 15.8% of all associate degrees conferred at the close of the five-year period, up from 11.8% in 1973-74, while public institutions accounted for 84.2% of all associate awards in 1977-78, down from the 88.2% of five years previous. Whereas all associate degrees awarded in the private sector in 1973-74 were in the fields of arts and sciences and general programs, the percentage of total conferrals in these areas decreased to 67.4% in 1977-78. Evidencing the greatest increase were health services technologies, which accounted for 28.9% of all 1977-78 associate conferrals in the private sector. The fields of public service technologies and mechanical and engineering technologies posted the greatest gains in the public sector, with increases of 116.8% and 100% respectively.

Bachelor's degree conferrals in 1977-78 totaled 15,881, an increase of 10.8% over the 14,339 conferred in 1973-74. The number of bachelor degrees awarded by public institutions increased 15.8% over the period, while degree output in the private sector decreased 12.1%. As a result of this disparity, public institutions in 1977-78 accounted for 85.7% of all such conferrals in Alabama, up from 82.9% in 1973-74 while the private sector produced 14.3% of the 1977-78 statewide total, down from 18.0% five years previous. Leading the increase in the public sector were the fields of computer and information sciences, health professions, and public affairs, in which 1977-78 degree conferrals were 760.0%, 458.0%, and 60.0% greater than in 1973-74, respectively. Registering significant drops in degree production were the fields of mathematics and social sciences, which decreased by 41.3% and 33.4% respectively. In the private sector the fields of mathematics and social sciences posted the most significant drops, decreasing 43.5% and 41.2% respectively, while degree output in the health professions evidenced the greatest increase where 1977-78 conferrals were 131.5% over the number of degrees awarded five years previous.

The number of master's degrees awarded in 1977-78 totaled 5,804, an increase of 36.2% over the 4,262 master's conferrals in 1973-74. Public sector institutions increased their degree output at this level by 37.9% over the period, and accounted for 96.6% of all master's degrees conferred in 1977-78, as opposed to 95.4% in 1973-74. The number of master's degrees awarded by privately controlled institutions remained essentially unchanged over the period, and accounted for 3.4% of all master's degrees awarded in 1977-78, compared to 4.6% of the total five years previous. Significant increases in public sector degree output came in the fields of health professions, public affairs, and education which evidenced respective increases of 93.6%, 65.6%, and 45.8%, while conferrals in the social sciences decreased by 33.5%. In the private sector, master's conferrals in the fields of business and commerce recorded an increase of 63.6%, while those in education decreased by 31.3%.

A total of 269 doctor's degrees were conferred in Alabama in 1977-78, a decrease of 1.5% from the 273 conferred five years previous. As in 1973-74, Alabama's public institutions produced all of the doctor's degrees that were awarded. Degree production at this level registered a decline of 28% between 1973-74 and 1974-75, however this decline was erased in subsequent years as degree production increased steadily to the most recent level. Significant increases were evidenced in the fields of natural resources and education, with degree conferrals registering respective increases of 85.7% and 4.0% over the period. The most significant decreases in doctoral degree production occurred in the fields of foreign languages and letters, in which degree output fell 80.0% and 72.2% respectively.

The number of first professional degrees awarded in 1977-78 totaled 790, an increase of 9.7% over the number conferred five years previous. Public sector institutions increased first professional degree output by 15.2% over the period and accounted for 67.2% of the 1977-78 conferrals. In comparison, 64% of all first professional degrees awarded in 1973-74 were conferred by public universities. Degree output in the private sector remained fairly stable over the period, with the 6% increase that occurred between 1973-74 and 1975-76 being erased by 1977-78 so that the number of first professional degrees produced at the close of the period was identical to that in 1973-74. The fields of medicine and dentistry evidenced the greatest increases in degree output in public institutions, with gains of 51.3% and 47.2% respectively, while the number of law degrees awarded in the public sector decreased 18.2% between 1973-74 and 1977-78. As in 1973-74, all first professional degrees conferred by private sector institutions in 1977-78 were awarded in the fields of law and veterinary medicine. The number of degrees awarded in each field at the close of the period was identical to the number conferred in 1973-74.
